

I've driven in snowstorms where the visibility was so bad all I could see at times was the inside of my windshield. With no place to pull over safely, all I could do was to keep driving by keeping an eye on the lane markers by looking out my side window. And hoping that that no one stops in front of me or hits me from behind. This leads me to this story of . . .

Listen to your Dad

While driving home a young driver got lost in a snowstorm. She remembered what her dad had told her. "If you ever get lost in a snowstorm, wait for a snowplow and follow it." Pretty soon a snowplow came by, and she started to follow it. She followed the plow for about forty-five minutes.

Finally, the driver of the truck got out and asked her what she was doing. She explained that her dad had told her if she ever got lost in a snowstorm, to follow a snowplow. The driver nodded and said, "Well, I'm done with WalMart, now you can follow me over to Home Depot."
